Gentleman's Bathroom

The Gentleman's Bathroom, formerly Mr. Cravens' private bath, has been transformed into a space for male visitors to make last minute adjustments to their tuxedo. "This is a place where he can slick down his hair, after it was mussed by a trip from the shore in his roadster," says designer Phill Vonk.

Wainscoting panels in antique white surround the walls of the room. A contemporary version of a Louis Philippe vanity has been accented with wall sconces and floor to ceiling mirrors to create an elegant glow and cast soft reflections on the dark tile flooring. Silken draperies on the tall windows enhance the feeling of luxury in the room. And what better place is there to stash those tennis clothes than in the beautiful alder armoire in glazed wheat?

A black tufted leather bench is available for the gentleman to unwind...or to gather one's thoughts before descending the staircase to the party below...
